REMEMBRANCE DAY

Never Again

It was a hundred years ago,
The end of a terrible war,
Millions say, "Never Again!"

Never again the pain and sorrow,
Never again the bombs of tomorrow,
Never again the smell of gas,
Never again the death of mass,

Never again the bombs and red sky,
Never again all who die,

Never again the rations of starvation,
Never again the sadness of evacuation,

Never again the air raids and dying,
Never again the shooting and crying,

Never again the horror of war,
That's why we say
Never again

By Scott Beer

Thank you to Wayne, one of school mentors, for providing this opportunity for Jacob.

On Remembrance Day 2018, Jacob went to the RSL to read aloud a poem to commemorate the First World War. This poem, written by a young boy, Scott Beer, touched me and every one at the event very deeply.
